SCIENCE TEACHERS.

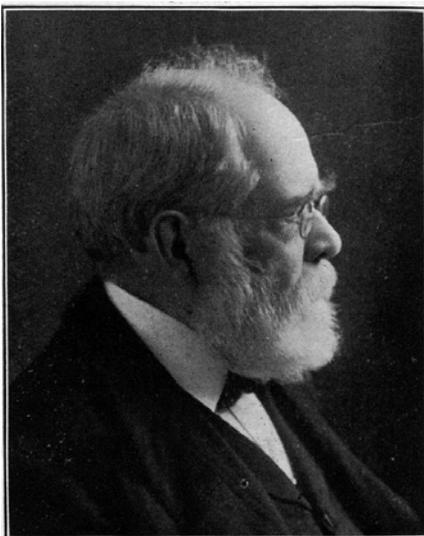

MISS Mabel Price, whose tragic death by accidental drowning so startled and grieved all who knew her, was a member of the teaching staff of MacDonald High School for twelve years, and of the School for Teachers for two years.

Young men and women remember her with affection and grief. For years she had the love and respect, not only of her colleagues, but of the children and their parents. Of her it may be truly said that she ruled and taught through love, not fear.

A lover of the out-of-doors and of Nature in all her moods, she inspired that same love in her students.

We too must pass, we too must disappear. Others will do our work as well, perhaps better than we did it. But character and love abide. To know Mabel Price was to love her—we are all better because we knew her.
